CIA Aide to Join Brown Faculty

PROVIDENCE, R.I., July 12

(AP)—Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, Jr., executive director and controller of the Central Intelligence Agency, will join the Brown University faculty in September as a professor of political science.

The University announced yesterday that he will teach a course on the operational aspects of the cold war and later a course on national security policy.

A native of Rochester, N.Y., Kirkpatrick has been with the CIA since after World War II. Last year he received the President's award for distinguished Federal civilian service. He is a 1938 graduate of Princeton University.
